

Kai Davis

CLARK
UNIVERSITY

February 27th in the Fireside Lounge at 6 P.M

Co-sponsored by Women's and Gender Studies with Students Advocating for Feminism and Empowerment (SAFE),
Black Students Union (BSU), and Prism

Two time international grand slam champion and award winning poet Kai Davis is coming to Clark to perform a selection of her poetry. Her work explores blackness, queerness, womanhood and how these identities converge. She speaks on structural racism, misogyny, black womanhood, ancestral trauma, mental health, intersectionality, queer love, black love, and more. We are thrilled to bring Kai Davis to our campus to share her powerful and inspiring words!

Kai Davis (she/her) is a Black Queer writer, performer and teaching artist from Philadelphia. Kai received her BA in both Africana Studies and English with a concentration in Creative Writing from Temple University. Kai has performed for TEDX Philly, CNN, BET, PBS, and NPR, among others. She has given readings and speeches in many notable venues, including the San Francisco Opera House, Gramercy Theater, The Kimmel Center, and The Nuyorican Poets Cafe, along with over 50 colleges across the country.
