

Abortion and the Supreme Court: Law, Health, and Politics after Dobbs

Aziza Ahmed

Professor of Law at Boston University and Co-Director of the BU Law Program in Reproductive Justice

Aziza Ahmed's scholarship examines the intersection of law, politics, and science in the fields of constitutional law, criminal law, health law, and family law. Her scholarship has appeared in journals including University of Miami Law Review, American Journal of Law and Medicine, Harvard Journal of Law and Gender, Boston University Law Review, and American Journal of International Law.

Ahmed is the author of the forthcoming book Feminism's Medicine: Law, Science, and Social Movements in the AIDS Response, published by Cambridge University Press, and coeditor of the forthcoming handbook, Race, Racism, and the Law, published by Edward Elgar Publishing.

Professor Ahmed earned a BA from Emory University, a JD from the University of California, Berkeley School of Law, and an MS in Population and International Health from the Harvard School of Public Health.

TILTON HALL UNIVERSITY CENTER

THURSDAY SEP. 21, 2023
5:00 – 6:30pm

FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

CLARK UNIVERSITY

