

Media Representations of Unhealthy Relationships and Gendered Violence: A Panel Discussion

SAFE (Students Advocating for Feminism and Empowerment) at Clark is hosting a panel featuring Clark professor Dr. Danielle Hanley, WSU faculty Dr. Dana Rognlie, and doctoral student Gia Davis, along with assorted Clark and WSU students, facilitated by WSU faculty Dr. Kathryn E. Frazier. They will discuss media representations of unhealthy relationship dynamics and sexual violence, as well the way that gender, race, and sexual orientation may inform these representations. They will be using the television shows You and Unbelievable, along with the recent film, Promising Young Woman, to facilitate this conversation.

Dr. Dana Rognlie

Visiting Assistant
Professor of Philosophy
at Worcester State University

Dr. Danielle Hanley

Professor of Women's and Gender Studies at
Clark University

Dr. Kathryn E. Frazier

Assistant Professor of Psychology at
Worcester State University

Gia Davis

Social Psychology
Doctoral Student at
Clark University

Friday, April 23rd, 2021
11:00am EST | Zoom

Pre-Register at: tinyurl.com/MediaRelationships

This event is sponsored by Clark University's Women's and Gender Studies Program; SAFE (Students Advocating for Feminism and Empowerment) at Clark University, and Worcester State University.